

Cranlana Centre for Ethical Leadership announces 2020 scholarship recipients

Strengthening wise and courageous leadership in not-for-profit, start-up and community sectors

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

10 February 2020 | Melbourne, Australia – Cranlana Centre for Ethical Leadership has announced the recipients of seven scholarships for its flagship programs in 2020 to individuals working in the not-for-profit, start-up, arts and culture, and community sectors.

Established in 1993, Cranlana Centre for Ethical Leadership (Cranlana Centre) offers a suite of immersive leadership programs that develop the ethical decision-making skills of Australia's leaders. Designed to sharpen critical reasoning and strengthen moral courage, Cranlana Centre's flagship courses are its six-day Executive Colloquium and 12-month Vincent Fairfax Fellowship, which cater to leaders from across the public, private and community sectors.

The seven scholarships for Cranlana Centre's flagship programs have been offered to outstanding leaders from the not-for-profit, start-up, arts and culture, and community sectors who demonstrate excellence and courage in ethical leadership.

Cranlana Centre's CEO, Vanessa Pigrum, says, "We are delighted to announce the recipients of our 2020 scholarship program. These outstanding leaders represent a broad range of sectors and interests and their lived experiences will contribute to the rich diversity of discussion which is central to Cranlana Centre's programs.

"We received applications from a significant number of individuals, confirming the appetite among people working in NFPs, start-ups, culture and community sectors for this unique type of leadership development opportunity. We look forward to welcoming all of the scholarship recipients to Cranlana Centre during the coming year."

The 2020 Cranlana Centre for Ethical Leadership scholarship recipients are:

Executive Colloquium scholarship recipients

- Henry Sherrell, independent migration policy and research consultant
- Josh Jones, Founder Just Be Nice Project
- Linh Do, Branch Manager Australia and the Pacific at The Climate Reality Project
- Mikhara Ramsing, Founder Ethnic LGBTQ+
- Sifatullah Ufat, interpreter Department of Home Affairs (Jim & Di Carlton scholarship)
- Tracy Collier, Head of Strategy and Programs at Thriving Communities Partnership (Anna Spraggett scholarship)

Vincent Fairfax Fellowship scholarship recipient

- Hayley Parks, Executive General Manager Strategy, Legal and Governance at Housing Choices Australia

Cranlana Centre's Executive Colloquium is an immersive six-day experience designed for Australia's most senior executives. Guided by skilled moderators, the Executive Colloquium provides participants with enhanced leadership capabilities and frameworks for complex decision-making. The Vincent Fairfax Fellowship is a 12-month program designed for business leaders seeking to influence their workplace culture. The program provides leaders with an opportunity to define and understand their organisation's ethical challenges and develop and implement a project to address these.

While the successful applicants were chosen from a broad range of industry sectors and backgrounds, two of the six scholarships have a specific focus. The Jim and Di Carlton Scholarship is for an individual from a refugee background who has achieved a position of leadership within Australia, or an individual who is demonstrating leadership through their work with refugees. The Anna Spraggett Award is awarded to a young woman (up to 40 years old), who is working to improve outcomes for socially disadvantaged and marginalised women and children in her community.
